An Earl Warren Conversation

Former Chief Justice of the United States Earl Warren gives his own interpretation of the "Warren years" tonight on the "Special of the Week: A Conversation With Earl Warren" (8, Channel 26). Brandeis University Chancellor Abram Sacher interviews the former Chief Justice.

Warren talks about his early political career as governor of California, his long career on the Court, the political evolution of several Supreme Court Justices and the problems faced by Southern judges. He also recounts the processes by which the court reached its decision in the 1954 "Brown vs. Board of Education" case —the case he found to be most important—and his reasons for accepting a role on the Warren Commission.
